Technical Co-Founder

The most promising start-ups are built in times of crisis. If not now – when?

Our early stage start-up builds a technology platform that helps users to automatically save up to a thousand Euros every year with only a few minutes of effort.

- With the user's consent and thanks to regulatory change across Europe various public and non-public sets of user data are analysed.

- Individual optimization opportunities are automatically identified significantly beyond what is possible today. Users can for instance automatically save in areas such as energy, insurance or telecom.

- Developer tools enable easy access to the platform for builders to create additional valuable functions.

- Unlike AdTech that analyses user data for the benefit of corporations, we put user data to work for the benefit of the user.

The person we are looking for

- has a strong computer science/data analytics background and experience working with real, messy data.

- is smart, driven, and able to get stuff done.

- is looking for a challenge and has a strong desire to have an impact and be an entrepreneur (but no prior experience required).

To start, a broad range of flexible collaboration models are possible. Let's talk !

If this sounds interesting to you, we would love to hear from you.
